

Natural Rosacea Products & Rosacea Medications : The Common Thread

Natural Rosacea Products - The Solution to Calm Skin? Many Say Yes! If you are one of the thousands of men and women suffering from the skin disorder rosacea or acne rosacea, you may already be familiar with the standard dermatologist-prescribed courses of action and medications. What many people don't know, is there are actually non-prescription, natural rosacea products that are just as effective, if not more effective, than prescription rosacea medications and topical rosacea gels and ointments. First, let's look at the common ingredients in pharmaceutical rosacea medications. Two popular topical prescription drugs for rosacea are Metronidazole and Azelic Acid. As an oral medication for rosacea, physicians may utilize a variety of medications, mostly antibiotic in nature, to help control rosacea by controlling severe facial flushing and swelling. Sometimes in severe cases, even cardiovascular medications are used to help control the facial flushing. Because of the higher risk of negative reactions associated with the long term use of oral antibiotics, topical therapy is usually the preferred long term treatment method. There is also the danger of antibiotic resistance becoming a problem for people who are treated long term with antibiotics. Topically applied rosacea medications, especially those of a natural origin, are becoming more and more popular, since there is no risk of them becoming ineffective over a period of time, as there may be with man-made topical rosacea solutions. In addition to topical rosacea gels, creams, and sprays, a complete skincare regimen including face wash and moisturizer should also be employed as a preventive measure for rosacea. People with rosacea have skin that requires intense and very specific care, every day, from cleanser to makeup. It is important that anything that comes into contact with the face does not have any skin-aggravating properties, but rather possesses skin-calming and anti-redness properties. There are natural rosacea skincare systems that will do just that, and before you know it, you will be "back in the clear".
