

Internet Pharmacies: Way Ahead Of Community Drugstores

Online Canadian pharmacies have brought in a radical change in the entire pharmaceutical industry. Over a very short period of time, a growing number of Internet pharmacies have registered their online presence. Getting the prescribed drug is much easier than with the age-old traditional pharmacies. While it might be argued that filling drugs from a community drugstore has its own share of benefits, the fact cannot be negated that online pharmacies offer a far more sophisticated service when compared to the traditional pharmacies. Pharmacies transacting with patients over the Internet offer a unique combination of superior technology and unmatched quality standards that go a long way in making them an even better and viable option for the patients. The primary benefit offered by an Internet pharmacy over community drugstores is the amount of convenience, safety and security involved in the entire transaction process. It might not be an easy option for a sick person to send somebody or even go on his own to the nearby drugstore to get the prescription filled. Apart from that, many patients are apprehensive about disclosing their identities or the medicines taken by them to the community pharmacies. An Internet pharmacy overcomes these shortcomings with an easy online order process backed by a delivery system that is safe, secure, and quick. The requested medicines are delivered within a short period of time to the patients. The patients are able to maintain full confidentiality of their identity in this case. The rising prices of drugs are a serious concern for patients. Community drugstores seldom offer discounts on a purchase. Compared to other countries, the cost of filling prescription medicines in Canada is relatively lower due to the price regulations imposed by the Canadian government on the purchase of prescription medicines. The low value of Canadian dollar against U.S dollar, coupled with attractive discounts, makes Canadian pharmacies an affordable option to the patients in the US. Community drug stores selling medicines over the counter, rarely offer enough information about a specific drug. Patients can either gain access to the drug literatures found in the respective packs or have to satisfy themselves with the half-baked opinions of the salesmen attending them in a community drugstore. Contrary to this, the Internet pharmacies offer authentic information on the various drugs they are dealing with. Unlike the hard to crack drug literatures, these pieces of information are presented in a lucid format that facilitates the common man to understand the effects and side effects of a particular drug. Community drugstores, due to the lack of proper technology, might not have a robust back up of the patients' case history. On the other hand, Internet pharmacies maintain a proper and confidential record of all the details of their respective clients. These details serve as valuable inputs to facilitate the patients in getting proper and prompt counseling on their health needs. Furthermore some Internet pharmacies also offer drug interaction checks to shield their patients from potentially harmful drug interactions. The benefits of getting the prescriptions filled from an online pharmacy are manifold.
