

Hill's drowning ruled accidental; more tests set

The death of New England Patriots defensive end Marquise Hill, who fell off a jet ski in Lake Pontchartrain near New Orleans, was ruled an accidental drowning on Tuesday. An autopsy found no signs of drug or alcohol in Hill's body, although more tests are planned and will take two weeks to complete, said Orleans Parish coroner Dr. Frank Minyard. Minyard said Hill might have suffered a mild concussion when he fell off the water craft. ...

Authorities have a search warrant to look for as many as 30 dog carcasses on property owned by Michael Vick that is at the center of a dog fighting investigation. But the warrant has not been executed. In a news release, Sheriff Harold D. Brown said the warrant issued May 23 has not been executed at the request of Brown and Surry County Commonwealth's Attorney Gerald G. Poindexter. The release did not say why the two officials leading the investigation into possible dog fighting made the request.

Early signing period for football discussed

The Southeastern Conference opened its annual spring meeting with talk about adding an early signing period to college football. The idea drew support from Kentucky's Rich Brooks and Vanderbilt's Bobby Johnson. But Florida's Urban Meyer strongly disapproved, and others were somewhat skeptical. Meyer has been one of the more active coaches late in the recruiting season, getting players to change their minds and sign with Florida. "I'm not comfortable signing kids you don't know," Meyer said. "I'd rather move later. I want to quit making mistakes. A mistake in recruiting just devastates a program. The only way to minimize the mistake-factor is to get to know someone." ...

Kansas guard Brandon Rush, who withdrew last week from the NBA Draft, will have surgery to repair torn ligaments and be sidelined up to six months. Kansas coach Bill Self said Rush will have surgery either later this week or next week. The Jayhawks' leading scorer injured his right knee in a pickup game last week when he landed awkwardly.
