

Biggest Loser focuses on pairs

Koops said he and the executive producers, J.D. Roth and Dave Broome, hatched the pairs idea during the early stages of last season. That was when a Long Island police officer, Jim Germanakos, was sent home, but his identical twin, a salesman named Bill, was not.

The elimination fell on the night before their birthday, which meant, among other things, that for the first time in their lives the Germanakos brothers wouldn't

Suddenly the dramatic possibilities of focusing on contestants with a shared history seemed glaringly apparent. (Bill Germanakos ended up taking home the Season 4 grand prize, while his brother won the weigh-in for a parallel competition in which contestants who had been eliminated continue to lose weight on their own.)
