

Drug Lobbyists Go After the Brains of Children

Big Pharma. These drugs cause permanent adverse alterations in the developing nervous system of children. There is a reason every school-related mass murder involves shooters that have been on psych drugs.

I m all in favor of needed health care for any child. However, psych drugs do not replace the responsibility of parents to provide a home and family, the quality of food fed to children, and learning skills about how to live. Solving this problem is easy

Immediately you would find that Big Pharma no longer cares about children s health.

Supreme Court Sets an Ominous Tone Against Citizen Rights to Sue

Thursday, February 21, 2008

Byron Richards, CCN

Today the Supreme Court ruled on the first of several related issues that could undermine the rights of citizens to sue drug companies when they have been injured by drugs. Today s decision was considered a "warm up" for what is soon expected, as the Court ruled that federal law bars lawsuits "challenging the safety or effectiveness of a medical device," as long as the FDA have given the device a premarket approval.

On a much larger and very similar legal topic the Supreme Court will rule on how these types of laws apply to drugs

The FDA wants laws that protect drug companies and prevent citizens from suing when they have been injured, all based on FDA approval. The Supreme Court is being asked to rule that federal laws can preempt state laws (nullify citizen s rights in state courts). Today s ruling means the Court is leaning towards supporting the FDA position on the larger drug-induced injury matter.

The FDA is a corrupt organization, failing to disclose information to the public about the dangers of commonly used drugs. Numerous injury scandals are currently being investigated by Congress

The FDA wants Americans to "trust" its judgment, when it has proven over and over again it has almost no clue of the actual risks of almost any drug on the market because it has failed to demand obviously needed safety follow up studies and it has hidden dangers during the original approval process. Should the Court rule in favor of the FDA and Big Pharma, and against American citizens, as it appears it will

Other Politics of Health News:

60 Minutes Blows the Lid Off the FDA s Trasylol Scandal, Monday, February 18, 2008

60 Minutes told the world last night that FDA ineptitude over the heart-bypass drug Trasylol cost 1,000 American lives a month, killing at least 22,000 Americans while the FDA dragged its feet.

Congressman Calls for FDA Chief Resignation, Saturday, February 16, 2008

In the face of mounting drug scandals and perjured congressional testimony, a key House Democrat, Rep. Bart Stupak (D-MI), told the Associated Press that FDA Commissioner Andrew von Eschenbach should step down. Stupak sites a "total lack of leadership" as it becomes plainly apparent that the FDA is unable to protect Americans from the dangers of drugs or ensure a safe food supply. The most troubling issue regarding FDA leadership is that many of these issues are due to gross negligence or taking the side of drug companies at the expense of human health.

Sickness Industry Reels from the Lack of Flu, Monday, February 11, 2008

The non-event of a flu season in 2008 shows just how sensitive health-related corporate America is tied to the profits of illness. A sad pallor set in over investor meetings as hospital chains such as Lifepoint and Health Management Associates reported very poor patient volume and low profits, especially in their cash cow businesses (children and the elderly). The reason for this stellar non-performance: virtually no flu season.

Heath Ledger Death Highlights Dangers of Medications, Wednesday, February 06, 2008

At least 100,000 Americans die every year from the expected as well as unknown side effects of toxic medications used primarily for symptom management. Another 3 million Americans require emergency room assistance to deal with injuries or severe side effects. In the case of Heath Ledger, the dangers in the combinations of the drugs he was taking are well known

Tragedy, with Controversy to Follow, Wednesday, January 23, 2008

The entertainment community is in shock over the loss of a rising star. Heath Ledger, dead at the age of 28, apparently from an accidental overdose of medication. Autopsy results have been delayed for 10 days, but enough information has already become public to understand what likely took place. Heath Ledger did not need to die

Antidepressant Cover Up, Tuesday, January 22, 2008

The great majority of negative studies about popular antidepressants such as Prozac, Zoloft, Paxil, and Effexor were never published according to a study in the New England Journal of Medicine, as reported in the New York Times.

Vytorin Fraud Places all Statin Therapy in Question, Tuesday, January 15, 2008

Excessively lowering cholesterol has been the mantra of Big Pharma gone wild. Congressional investigation into a fraudulent cover-up of Vytorin study results led Merck and Schering-Plough to reveal what everyone had been suspecting, the main ingredient in their 5-billion-a-year scam failed miserably to do anything useful.

FDA to Allow Unlabelled Cloned Meat and Milk,

The FDA has now plummeted to an all time low. This despicable band of industry promoters has no idea what real food is. In its financially motivated decree it is now telling Americans that that food from cloned animals is safe to eat and no different than food from normal animals. How dumb does the FDA think the American public is?

The FDA Attacks Women

Declares Estriol Illegal, Monday, January 14, 2008

In a shocking and blatant attack on women, the FDA has declared Estriol illegal. This move is designed to stop compounding pharmacies from making bio-identical hormone creams and will also stop over-the-counter Estriol-containing creams from being sold to women. The FDA has no report of any problem from these creams. It is acting on a complaint from Wyeth (the makers of estrogen-containing horse urine extract and Centrum vitamins). Millions of women are adversely affected.

The FDA is Sued

Public Citizen seeking to force the FDA to do its pretended job of protecting American citizens from the dangers of drugs. Of course, the real FDA job, as prioritized by top FDA management, is to protect the sales of Big Pharma and create new market opportunities for Big Pharma and Big Biotech while using Americans for experimental purposes

Lipitor Suit Moves Forward while Officials Flee the Law in Nigeria, Wednesday, December 26, 2007

Lipitor for lowering cholesterol (a Statin) is the best selling drug of all time. A newly unveiled lawsuit based on information provided by a top former Pfizer exec now turned whistleblower is showing that this stroke of marketing genius was based on blatantly illegal marketing and pushing the drug on Americans who really did not need it. As the poster child for the Statin scam Pfizer has likely damaged the health of millions of Americans. Now there is an attempt to hit them where it counts, in the pocket book.

Corn

When is Food No Longer Food?, Tuesday, December 18, 2007

Farmers growing corn for ethanol are no longer farmers in any traditional sense; they are part of the oil industry. It is now being reported that the millions of pounds of nitrogen-based fertilizer needed to grow the corn are entering the Mississippi and going out into the gulf wherein they create a 7,900-square-mile "dead zone" void of oxygen wherein fish, crabs and shrimp suffocate and hostile algae grow.

Dietary Supplement Trade Group Promotes Food Coloring Use, Friday, December 14, 2007

The International Alliance for Dietary/Food Supplement Associations (IADSA) is actively supporting the use of food coloring in dietary supplements, guidelines that are being written up for the proposed Codex guidelines that pose a grave threat to free access to dietary supplements in America.

Spotlight Shines on Ineptitude of Medical Sinus Treatments, Monday, December 10, 2007

The Journal of the American Medical Association has just published a double-blind, randomized, placebo-controlled study showing that the use of antibiotics and nasal steroids is ineffective at treating sinusitis.

Common Diabetes Drug Causes Bone Loss

Medical Profession in a Funk, Tuesday, December 04, 2007

The commonly used and much maligned diabetes drug, Avandia, just took another spill down the stairs. A new mouse study shows that the drug weakens bones and is likely to cause osteoporosis in the millions of users in the United States. The drug was shown to get directly in the way of healthy bone function, causing accelerated bone loss and slowed bone growth.

CT Scans: A Source of Medically Induced Cancer, Thursday, November 29, 2007

Does it upset anybody to know that 1000 cases of cancer per year are needlessly caused in children by the very doctors who the children are seeing for help? An additional 4000 cases of cancer are caused in children each year under the pretense that taking a picture of the child's internal body is medically necessary. The frequency of cancer in the adult population from CT scans is 10-20 times the number for children (10,000-20,000 needless cases of cancer plus an additional 40,000-80,000 "justified" cases of cancer).

The Gullible Jennifer Garner Flu Shot Campaign, Wednesday, November 14, 2007

Flu shots remain a subject of intense controversy. Vaccinations of all types remain the centerpiece of the public health herd-mentality paradigm. Just wait until the Avian flu comes, then you will see public health at its finest. Yes, there will be police-state forced vaccinations with experimental vaccines and no right of recourse if you are injured. Thanks to our generally brain-dead Congress the laws are already on the books.

FDA Fails Women on Birth Control Safety, Wednesday, November 07, 2007

A preliminary study shows that for every 10 years of birth control pills there is a 20

The study was presented at the yearly meeting of the American Heart Association, placing it in the national news spotlight. News stations have been carrying the story and the typical medical spokespeople are trying to allay the fears of millions of birth control pill users. There are two main issues here: the FDA "ineptitude issue" and the "what to do about it issue."

Amazingly, FDA has Bayer Pull Trasylol from the Market, Monday, November 05, 2007

Is the FDA really changing? It's hard to believe but the FDA finally acted in the best interests of consumers, shooting down a bio-tech drug that made Bayer millions and was at one time on the verge of becoming a blockbuster. I have openly criticized the FDA for some time on Trasylol, as it dragged its feet on this issue for almost two years.

Doctors Over-prescribe Reflux Meds to Infants 80% of the Time,

The IQ of doctors needs to be measured. Are they really this stupid, or are they just puppets of Big Pharma? A new study has found that doctors are handing out acid suppressing medication to children far in excess of what they should be doing, threatening the digestive health of a child for a lifetime. Sure the child has digestive symptoms. Quite frankly, this 80% over-prescription finding most likely relates to numerous medications. Doctors today have almost no clue how to fix health issues besides robotically writing a prescription for a symptom-suppressing medication.

The FDA Remains Broken, Trasylo, a Case In Point, Monday, October 29, 2007

Trasylo is a drug that promotes clotting and is given during heart bypass surgery. It is one of the new and expensive biotech drugs of Bayer. Patients generally don't know they are getting it, and it significantly increases kidney failure and the likelihood they will die at a significantly increased rate in the next few years following surgery. You can imagine that giving a clotting drug to patients with clogged arteries may have some problems. There are other options that are inexpensive and don't carry the risks.

Cancer Industry Lobbies for Profits that Kill, Tuesday, October 23, 2007

Billions of dollars of profit are at stake. The new generation of biotech drugs is upon us. Will they help or will they kill? The answer, it appears, depends on the dose. More importantly, the answer depends on the moral integrity of oncologists that treat their patients. What should society do with doctors that put money in their pockets as a priority over the lives of their patients?

Washington Post Calls the FDA's New Reagan-Udall Center Rife With Risks, Monday, October 15, 2007

Since midsummer I was the primary drum beat warning of the grave consequences to health freedom and health in general about turning the FDA into a pseudo drug company by giving it control over the licensing, patenting, and profits of the very drugs it is supposed to be regulating. Congressional birdbrains failed to even debate the most sweeping change of the FDA in a hundred years!

China

Of the 7 million dollars given to the 2008 presidential candidates so far by the health industry Mormon Mitt Romney has taken the lead with $80,000 coming from the Mormon state of Utah's multi-level vitamin companies Xango, LLC and Melaluca, Inc. To my knowledge Mitt Romney has never taken any public position in support of dietary supplements on any key issue. Mitt Romney has just unveiled a health plan to

The FDA Silently Sanctions Broad Use of Anti-Psychotic Medication in Children, Thursday, August 23, 2007

If any person was ever looking for evidence that the medical profession and the FDA were beholden to the drug companies at the expense of human health, the use of anti-psychotic medication in our children is the classic example. On August 22, 2007 the FDA approved Johnson & Johnson's atypical anti-psychotic drug Risperdal for the treatment of schizophrenia in adolescents, ages 13 to 17, and for the short-term treatment of manic or mixed episodes of bipolar disorder in children and adolescents ages 10 to 17. In so doing the FDA has silently condoned the use of this class of powerful brain-altering drug to be given for off label use to treat temper tantrums and behavioral outbursts in children of all ages. This is sick beyond comprehension

Merck Spends 1 Billion to Silence Vioxx Complaints, Tuesday, August 21, 2007

Merck's Vioxx pain killer needlessly killed anywhere from 50,000 to 150,000 people. It was allowed on the market by the FDA even though FDA managers knew there were major problems. Merck certainly knew there were major problems. Those who were seriously injured or the families of those who were killed have sought monetary damages from Merck, rather than criminal prosecution of Merck executives and FDA managers....

Drug Companies Embark Upon the Era of Unprecedented Human Experiments, Monday, August 06, 2007

The Washington Post now reports the death of a 36-year-old woman who was the sole participant in another experiment with a biotech drug made of genetically altered viruses. The dead woman's husband reports she was deceived as to the risks of the experiment. Consumers beware

FDA Managers Earn Bonuses while Americans Die, Friday, August 03, 2007

The Washington Post reports that FDA managers are given preference for bonuses over technical and scientific staff, a practice that has been going on while the very same managers have been actively hiding safety data from the public and failing to act to inform the public when a drug is known to have an increased risk of death as a side effect....

The FDA

Culture of Corruption, Thursday, July 26, 2007

Question: What does the FDA do when a new potential blockbuster drug poses a significant risk for heart failure?

Answer: It removes the lead scientist from the drug's approval process to silence the problem.

The House Version of S.1082 (H.R.2900) Continues the Attack on Dietary Supplements, Monday, July 02, 2007

Fake drug safety legislation now moves to the floor of the House (H.R. 2900). The Senate has already passed its similar version (S.1082). Within this legislation is a blatant attack by the FDA on dietary supplements. The FDA is seeking the power to brand dietary supplements as unsafe using drug related risk-benefit analysis. Unless the wording in the bill is changed the FDA will have the power to remove any dietary supplement from the market based on its opinion. The bill is expected to come to the floor of the House for debate and vote during the second or third week of July.

Wellness Resources Sponsors Aaron Russo film, America

Thousands Die While FDA has Mud on Its Face, Monday, June 11, 2007

The Avandia scandal took a new turn last week as the New York Times broke the story that Rosemary Johann-Liang, deputy director of the FDA's Division of Drug Risk Evaluation, was reprimanded last year by FDA top brass for approving a black box warning to let doctors and patients know that Avandia causes an increased risk for heart failure. It is apparently the policy of dysfunctional FDA management to punish safety staff when they do something that may cost Big Pharma dearly so as to protect human health....

What does it take to get a Black Box Warning?, Thursday, June 07, 2007

Critics of the FDA and Big Pharma have for years complained that the FDA stifles needed health warnings so as to allow pharmaceutical companies to gain market share and profits at the expense of human health. This is certainly the case with antidepressants, ADHD drugs, and atypical antipsychotics. A classic example of this problem has come to light as part of the Avandia scandal.

FDA Allows Off-Label Narcotic Sales, Tuesday, November 21, 2006

The narcotic lollipop known as Actin, made by Cephalon, is approved to treat cancer pain. Its sales are booming, likely to hit 600 million dollars this year. Fewer than 20% of the drug sales are for cancer pain. Most are for off-label use such as headache, remedies widely promoted by the company's sales force and in company-sponsored physician training vacations. The sales crew also promotes starting patients on eight times the recommended starting dose.

Big Pharma Tries to Buy Elections, Saturday, October 28, 2006

Big Pharma had already poured 8 million into vote buying, and the month of October hadn't even started. At stake is the Bush-granted gravy train called Medicare, bilking older Americans by not permitting the government to negotiate drug prices with Big Pharma - one major item in a long list of Big Pharma thefts from American workers and retirees.

This involves the issues that are not covered, or not covered truthfully by the "National News Media." "In the time of universal deceit, telling the truth is a revolutionary act." - George Orwell. To warn the public of the present and coming danger of permitting the federalizing of local police departments across our nation is of the utmost importance. If allowed to continue, the federalizing of local police departments, will result in the planned replication of the infamous "Nazi storm troopers" reminiscent of Hitler's Germany in recent past history.
